"The Myth of Adjustment" must develop a tolerance of frustrations and anxieties," he said, indicating that frustrations are the basic substance of that which is creative, important and productive.

Introduced by Merl F. Sloan, director of student personnel at El Camino, Dr. Harvey stressed that one cannot be rid of frustrations. "We him national recognition and awards, looked critically at those persons who feel that "adjustment is tantamount to reaching a state where there is no anxiety, fear want; discomfort . . . They lie limply," he said, "without flavor, color or odor like gelatin."

The speaker compared mental illness with polio, indicating that there may be no cure
